MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET The dark web is the deepest layer – an untraceable network that can only be accessed using specific software, i.e. an open-source program called Tor or a network called Invisible Internet Project. Photo courtesy: Benjamin Torode/Getty Images Make sure you have reliable security software on your device. Websites on the dark web only exist on the dark web, so to access them you need to use the Tor browser. People often use the terms “deep web” and “dark web” interchangeably, but there’s a big difference. It is also worth noting that many users find their obscure web searches slow and unpredictable. Some obscure sites are created by crooks and criminals. The deep web is the next level, involving content behind paywalls, online banking information and other pages that you can’t access through a typical internet search. So, it should be a surprise that it’s not enough to find your way. Photo courtesy: Tetra Images/Getty Images The dark web is made up of pages and content that are indexable, like deep websites, but they are also typically associated with illegal activities although not everything that goes on there is illegal. Many users of the dark web sell black market goods, engage in extremist activities, provide hacking services and carry out other nefarious actions. Stay with the URLs you can trust, either because you have received personal recommendations or because you have been able to verify their legitimacy from different sources. Other content found on the deep web include content on your social media pages, online banking information and personal emails.
